

The Hôtel de Glace has now melted and the entire team is working on recreating the magic for 2012

Québec, June 8th, 2011 – May 31st, the last trace of ice of the Hôtel de Glace has now melted under the spring sun. While the Hôtel de Glace goes slowly back to the Saint-Lawrence River, the entire team works actively on the creative process of the 2012 edition. The creative team is working hard, the new concept is taking shape slowly and preliminary sketches bring a fresh perspective and enthusiasm! The Hôtel de Glace's team remains active, even in summertime!

Just physically disappeared, the Hôtel de Glace resurfaces virtually

As Jacques Desbois, founder and CEO of the Hôtel de Glace says: "The northern discovery or northern life will be in the heart of the next theme and we are already looking forward to presenting the new features of the Hôtel de Glace 2012. Summer is an important period where ingenuity, innovation and design arts must come together to recreate the magic of this vast complex of ice and snow that reappears every winter."

Promising upcoming season for the Hôtel de Glace

By late June, even if the chapel is still in draft form in the designer's minds, a dozen wedding contracts will be signed. This would represent a 50% increase over last year. According to Nancy Ruel, Director of Sales, Communications and Marketing: "The fact that more and more couples seeking an exotic destination for their wedding are wishing to unite their destiny at the Hôtel de Glace is a testament to the quality of our chapel which offers a unique and romantic atmosphere." Also, the Hôtel de Glace has participated in Rendez-Vous Canada this past May, where more than 1,500 tourism professionals attended. Having experienced a record attendance of buyers and sellers, this major event has allowed the Hôtel de Glace to promote its various offers. In addition, during Rendez-vous Canada, the Canadian Tourism Commission launched its "Signature Experiences Collection" where the Hôtel de Glace is presented as a unique experience to do in the province of Québec. Finally, the Hôtel de Glace will soon be announcing its new packages for 2012. For more information about these new packages, visit www.hoteldeglace-canada.com at the end of June.
